SCOTTISH DIRECTORY

BRITISH, COLONIAL, AND FOREIGN MERCANTILE GUIDE.

This Section, added at the solicitation of many of our Subscribers, has been much appreciated, as it forms a most useful GUIDE to BUYERS, and more so in consequence of many leading and influential firms having inserted particulars of their various specialities, under the several classifications or trade headings, rendering it more serviceable than a mere list of names.

This Section is compiled without any pretensions to completeness, it being necessary to make a nominal (but necessary) charge for inserting names, to enable us to continue to issue the work at a popular price, so that its extensive circulation should not be impaired.

ABERDEEN, city on the River Dee The county town of Aberdeenshire, a Royal and Parliamentary burgh, a University town, a seat of Justiciary and Sheriff Courts, and a head port. It is one of the finest cities in Great Britain, and being built of granite, is aptly called "The Granite City." The public buildings are numerous, and include the Municipal and County Buildings (1869), cost £60,000; Lunatic Asylum (1819), £20,000; Infirmary (1840), £17,000; Marischal College (extension opened by King Edward VII., 1907), £271,500; Grammar School (1863), £15,000; Post Office (1907), £50,000; the New Market (1882), £23,000, the most handsome building of its kind in Scotland; many attractive ecclesiastical buildings; and several new and capacious schools. The public parks are the Victoria Park, the Union Terrace Gardens (with a colossal statue to the memory of Wallace), and the Duthie Park. Its chief industries are: — Shipbuilding, engineering, fish curing, papermaking, granite polishing, &c. The harbour is most commodious. A large import and export trade is carried on, and coasting steamers sail regularly to Buckie, Cromarty, Dundee, Leith (for Edinburgh), Hull, Invergordon, Inverness, Kirkwall, Lerwick, Liverpool, London, Newcastle, Oban, Stromness, Stornoway, Thurso, Wick, &c. It is one of the principal fishing ports on the east coast. Pop. 163,084

CLYDE, one of the largest rivers of Scotland, rising in the south part of Lanarkshire, and forming an arm of the sea, called the Firth of Clyde, near the castle of Dumharton. It becomes navigable at the city of Glasgow. The first boat in Europe successfully propelled by steam was launched on this river in 1812; and since then the river's shipping and shipbuilding have both grown enormously. Near Lanark the river descends from 560 to 200 feet, forming the celebrated Falls of Clyde, above which flows a beautiful trout stream, passing through a fertile valley amid lovely scenery. The waters become more sluggish and polluted as it nears Glasgow, and large sums of money have been spent in improving and deepening the channel from Glasgow to Dumharton, with great success. Along the ancient sea-margin of the river is an almost continuous line of watering-places, much frequented during the summer months. On its banks are some of the largest shipbuilding and marine engineering works in the world

EDINBURGH, metropolis of Scotland, seat of the college of justice or court of session, which is the supreme court of Scotland; of the justiciary, exchequer, and other courts; a university city, royal and parliamentary burgh, the county town of Edinburghshire, and the place of the annual meeting of General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland, the Free, and the United Free Churches; a city of great antiquity, was for many centuries seat of royal adminstration, and the meeting place of Parliament. It has figured so long and prominently in national events that its history is much connected with the general history of Scotland. Of late years it has made progressive extensions, and Portobello is now included within its boundaries. The public buildings are numerous and attractive, many of them magnificent edifices. Among those of most interest are:—Holyrood Palace, the Castle, Parliament House, University; New University Buildings, including the M'Ewan Hall (1897) gifted by the late Right Hon. Wm. M'Ewan, ex-M.P. for city; New North Bridge (1897); the Royal Scottish Museum, Antiquarian Museum, Phrenological Museum; Heriot's Hospital (1650) and Heriot College; Royal Exchange (municipal offices and museum); Bank of Scotland (1806) £75,000; County Buildings, rebuilt 1904; Register House (Government offices); High School (1827) £30,000; Edinburgh Academy (1824) £20,000; Royal College of Surgeons (1833) £20,000; the Orphan Hospital (1833) £16,000; Royal Scottish Academy (1836); Donaldson's Hospital (1851) £100,000; British Linen Co.'s Bank (1852) £30,000; Stewart's College (1853) £30,000; Art Galleries (1858) £40,000; General Post Office (1866) £120,000, since added to; Sheriff Court Buildings (1868) £44,000; Fettes' College (1870) £150,000; the Royal Infirmary (1879) £380,000; National Portrait Gallery (1889) gifted by the late J. R. Findlay, of the "Scotsman;" Free Library (1890) £50,860 (the gift of Dr A. Carnegie). The Usher Hall (the gift of the late Mr Andrew Usher) £100,000, and the Royal College of Art. The chief industries are printing, publishing, and brewing. It has a Royal Asylum for the Insane, Blind Asylum, Deaf and Dumb Institution, &c., Botanic Gardens and Arboretum, several public parks and squares adorned by many monuments, of which the most conspicuous is Sir Walter Scott's, completed in 1844. The King's Park is the finest natural park in the country. The University has obtained a world-wide reputation, while the other educational establishments are justly celebrated. It has numerous benevolent and charitable establishments, and valuable endowments for the maintenance and instruction of the young, and a variety of scientific, literary, and religious institutions. It has a Fire Station, with all modern appliances; and important stock markets, slaughter-houses, and corn exchange at Gorgie. The ecclesiastical buildings are both numerous and handsome, several of which are highly interesting. Redford Barracks—a large military station—is in the western suburbs. The Churches are Established, Free, United Free, Episcopal, Baptist, Congregational, Evangelical Union, Wesleyan, Roman Catholic, Original Secession, Primitive Methodist, Catholic Apostolic, Society of Friends, Unitarian, and a Jewish Synagogue. It has railway communication to all parts, and two important stations—the "Waverley" being the largest covered station in the country. Its seaports are Leith and Granton. Pop., including Portobello (annexed), 331,355

EDINBURGHSHIRE, OR MIDLOTHIAN, a county, extending about 12 miles along the southern shore of the Firth of Forth, by which it is bounded on the north, on the east by the county of Haddington, south by the counties of Lanark, Peebles, and Berwick, and on the west corner by part of the county of Linlithgow. The general aspect of the county is pleasant, being fertile, highly cultivated, and yielding excellent crops. The Moorfoot and Pentland Hills run through the county, in some places rising to a considerable height. It has several small rivers, such as the Esk, the Almond, and the Water of Leith. The farms of Midlothian rank among the best in the world, and pastureland is good, especially in the hilly parts. Among the minerals found are coal, iron, sandstone, and limestone. FORTH, a river which rises in the north side of Ben Lomond, and gradually north of Ben Lomond, and gradually expands into an estuary called the Firth of Forth, which extends for many miles. It is about 35 to 40 miles wide at its mouth from Fifeness on the north to St Abb's Head on the south shore. It contains a number of small islands, among which are Inchkeith, Isle of May, both having lighthouses, Inchgarvie, Inchcolm, and the Bass Rock. The Forth possesses many good harbours, and St Margaret's Hope, above Queensferry, is one of the safest roadsteads in the kingdom. The river is 180 miles long, including the celebrated "links or windings." The Forth is crossed at Queensferry by the famous railway bridge, which consists of two main spans of 1710 feet each, and two of 675; its total length, inclusive of piers, being over a mile and a half. It was built at a cost of £3,500,000 (including connecting railways). The engineers were Sir John Fowler and Sir Benjamin Baker

GLASGOW, the commercial and manufacturing capital of Scotland, and, in aggregate importance, the second city in the empire. Situated on the Clyde, 46¼ m. Caledonian Railway and 47¼ m. North British Railway from Edinburgh, and 401 miles from London. It is the political capital of Lanarkshire, a royal and parliamentary burgh, a county, a university city, seat of justiciary and sheriff courts, and a head port. Originating from the cathedral founded about A.D. 560; was made a royal burgh in 1180; and was but a small burgh of limited extent in 1550. Its great and continued prosperity—entirely the result of enterprise and skill in manufactures and commerce—only dates from the 18th century. Its present vast predominance testifies to the vitality and energy of its citizens. In the fifty years between 1831 and 1881 it considerably more than trebled its population, and now, including suburbs, is of such magnitude that space will not admit here of even a meagre description. The public buildings are both numerous and handsome, and include many very interesting and noble structures. The Cathedral, the University, the Merchants' House, the General Post Office, and the Royal Exchange, may be mentioned. The Municipal buildings, opened by Queen Victoria, 22nd August 1888, cost about £700,000, including £170,000 paid for the site. The charitable institutions are many, the most important being the Royal, Western, and Victoria Infirmaries, Fever Hospitals, Small-pox Hospital, Maternity Hospital, Asylum for the Blind, Deaf and Dumb Institute, Lunatic Asylum, &c. It has various scientific and literary institutions, including a museum and many public libraries, also a Botanic Garden, several public parks and many monuments—no fewer than 13 standing in George Square. The Churches are Established, Free, United Free, Episcopal, Baptist, Evangelical Union, Congregational, Wesleyan, Roman Catholic, Catholic Apostolic, Methodist, Christadelphian, Original Secession, Unitarian, Plymouth Brethern, Society of Friends, Christian Brethren, and a Jewish Synagogue. The harbour shared in the prosperity of the city, and by extensions from time to time, necessitated by increasing trade, acquired its present greatness at a cost of £10,000,000. In 1801 the quayage of the harbour was only 382 yards in length, the water area 4 acres; the revenue from the harbour and river £3400. In 1906 the length of the quayage was 17,907 yards, the area of the harbour and docks 479½ acres, of which 166½ is land and 313 water, and the revenue £528,569. For about 2¼ miles from Glasgow Bridge the river presents the appearance of an immense dock, and is deep enough for the largest sea-going ships. The harbour possesses all the appliances of a first-class port, and is connected with the whole railway system of the kingdom. Headquarters of the great shipbuilding and marine engineering trade of the Clyde, and centre of the great iron and steel industry. An extensive electric tramway system, owned by the Corporation, connects all the adjacent suburbs and towns. Its imports and exports are only exceeded by Liverpool. Pop. 1,008,487

HEBRIDES, THE, as now understood, includes all the Western Islands from the Mull of Kintyre to Cape Wrath, consisting of a series of groups of islands and rocky islets extending 205 miles—from the Butt of Lewis to the Mull of Ooa in Islay—along the weird, wild, and romantic coast of the West Highlands. The distance of the various islands from the mainland varies from less than ½ a mile at Kyle Rhea, south-east of Skye, to over 100 miles to lone St Kilda, and from 1½ miles at Gigha to 21 at the south of Islay. The entire number of these islands and islets exceeds 500, but only about 180 are of any value. Of these, 99 are inhabited, Lewis and Harris, Skye, Mull, Islay, Jura, and North and South Uists of the principal islands. These are very much diversified as regards scenery—that of Skye and other islands of the Inner Hebrides being the grandest scenery perhaps in Scotland; the scenery of Lewis and other islands of the Outer Hebrides is less picturesque, but a peculiar feature of these is the immense number of freshwater lochs scattered everywhere, and yielding some of the best salmon and trout fishing in Scotland. Most of the islands are extensively intersected by inlets and arms of the sea, affording safe and sheltered anchorage. The Lords of the Isles and the Insular Chiefs of the various turbulent clans have left numerous monuments of their ambition and their rule, in the form of towers and castles; and the remains of the religious establishments testify to the Christian zeal and piety of former generations

INVERNESS-SHIRE is the largest county in Scotland, stretching from sea to sea; it is bounded on the north by Ross-shire and part of the Moray Firth, east by the counties of Nairn, Moray, and Aberdeen, and south by those of Perth and Argyle, and west by the Atlantic Ocean. A small district between the counties of Banff and Moray is annexed, and several of the Hebrides—Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Raasay, Eigg, St Kilda, and others. The mainland portion is divided into two almost equal parts by the Great Glen and the Caledonian Canal; the northern extremity of this glen opens by the river Ness into the Moray Firth, and flowing in a south-westerly direction encloses Lochs Ness, Oich, Lochy, and Eil, whence it extends into the Atlantic Ocean by Loch Linnhe. In the northern part is Strath Glass, with its tributaries, running into the Firth of Beauly. The county is noted for its unsurpassed romantic scenery, its glens and mountains. It contains Ben Nevis, the highest mountain in Britain, which attains a height of 4406 feet, and several other ranges which present some of the finest mountain scenery in the world. It is well watered, the principal rivers being the Ness, the Lochy, the Beauly, and the Spey. The Caledonian Canal connects the east and west seas from Loch Eil on the west to the Moray Firth on the east coast. The west coast is indented by numerous salt-water lochs. There are extensive grouse moors and deer forests, game being very plentiful; the rivers abound with salmon, and in the lochs the char is found in great perfection. Only a small portion of the land is cultivated, the greater part being moor and heathy ground; black sheep are reared in large numbers, also cattle. KINCARDINESHIRE, OR MEARNS, is bounded on the east by the German Ocean, north by the river Dee and part of Aberdeenshire, and on the south and west by the county of Forfar, from which it is separated by the North Esk. The county may be divided into four sections (1) the Deeside, a valley through which flows the river Dee; (2) the coast; (3) the "Howe o' the Mearns"; and (4) the Grampians. The land on the coast and the "Howe o' the Mearns" is very fertile and well cultivated; the "Howe" forms a continuation of the Valley of Strathmore. The bleak country commencing about three miles from the coast increases in altitude until at the west extremity of the county it terminates in Mount Battock nearly 3500 feet above the level of the sea. The principal rivers are the Dee, the North Esk, Bervie Water, and the Cowie, also several smaller rivers. The minerals found are granite and sandstone. Large numbers of cattle are fed and reared. LANARKSHIRE, OR CLYDESDALE, a county, bounded on the north and north-west by the counties of Renfrew, Dumbarton, and Stirling, north-east by the counties of Linlithgow and Edinburgh, east by Peeblesshire, south by Dumfriesshire, and south-west by Ayrshire. The county is divided into three wards. The Southern or Upper Ward comprises nearly two-thirds of the whole county, and consists for the most part of hills and moors; the hills in some parts rising to a considerable height; further down the Clyde the scenery is very picturesque. In the Middle Ward the surface is flatter and the soil more fertile. The principal river is the Clyde with its numerous tributaries. It has two canals, the Forth and Clyde Canal and the Monkland Canal. The county is famous for its orchards, also fruits and vegetables, which are grown for the Glasgow market. Lanarkshire contains the chief coal-fields in Scotland, which are very extensive. It is also noted for the rearing of cattle and dairy farming. Among the numerous minerals found are freestone, limestone, ironstone, granite, and coal. It produces more coal and iron than any other county in Scotland. ROSS AND CROMARTY, a large district comprising the counties of Ross and Cromarty, and extending from the Atlantic to the German Ocean. It is bounded north by Sutherland, east by the Moray Firth, south by Inverness-shire, and west by the Minch. The surface of the county is very irregular, being much indented by numerous lakes and firths, the chief being Cromarty and Dornoch Firths, Loch Carron, Loch Broom, Loch Gairloch, and Loch Gremord. The land on the eastern coast, to a short distance of the sea, is well cultivated and fertile; but beyond this it is bleak and wild, though there are many pleasant glens and valleys which afford excellent pasture for sheep and cattle. It has several mountains of considerable height, Ben Wyvis being 3720 feet high. The principal rivers are the Conon, the Orrin, the Beauly, and the Oickel. It has also numerous lakes in the valleys, the principal being Loch Maree, Loch Fannich, Loch Monar, and Loch Luichart. Wheat and timber are raised; the larger portion of the land being pasture, the inhabitants are mostly engaged in feeding and rearing cattle. Ross and Cromarty returns one member to Parliament. SELKIRKSHIRE, an irregular county, bounded north and west by Peeblesshire and the county of Edinburgh, east and south-east by Roxburghshire, and south by the county of Dumfries. The surface consists, for the most part, of a succession of mountain ranges, some of which afford excellent pasture for cattle and sheep, while others are well wooded in some parts, and covered with heather and moss in others. Between the hills there are fertile and well-watered valleys of great fertility. The principal rivers are the Tweed, the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Gala. Selkirkshire contains nearly the whole of the old forest of Ettrick, also the Vale of Ettrick, and the whole course of the Yarrow, celebrated in Scottish song. The principal crops are barley, wheat, oats, turnips, and clover. Large numbers of sheep and cattle are reared, which afford meat of excellent quality. Selkirkshire unites with Peeblesshire to return one member to Parliament. Area, 170,793 acres. Pop. 24,601

STIRLINGSHIRE, a county, bounded north by the counties of Perth and Clackmannan, on the east by the Firth of Forth and Linlithgowshire, and on the south and west by the counties of Lanark and Dumbarton. The county is diversified by mountains, hills, plains, woods, and plantations. A broad plain stretches from the Water of Avon towards the north-west, and is terminated by the Grampian Hills and Ben Lomond. It is intersected by the Forth, and includes the vales of Stirling and Falkirk, which produce excellent crops. The central and southern districts are partly mountainous and partly level and fertile, the former being, for the most part, occupied by the Campsie Hills. The principal rivers are the Forth, the Carron, the Bannockburn, the Endrick, the Blane, and the Kelvin. Loch Lomond is on the west borders of the county, and a navigable canal, which connects the Firth of Forth with the Clyde is partly in Stirlingshire. All the common crops are grown, and large numbers of cattle are fed. Coal is found in great abundance, also ironstone, freestone, limestone, silver, copper, cobalt. and lead. Stirlingshire is the scene of many important historical events, of which many traces still remain. Stirlingshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 288,842 acres. Pop. 160,991

SUTHERLANDSHIRE, a county, extending across the whole breadth of Scotland, from the North Sea to the Atlantic Ocean. It is bounded on the west by the Minch, north by the Atlantic Ocean, east by the county of Caithness, south-east by the Dornoch Firth, and south by the Oickel and several smaller streams, which separates it from the county of Ross and Cromarty. The surface of the county is rugged and mountainous, except on the south-east shore. The eastern district, near the German Ocean, consists of a strip of level land which runs along the coast side; the middle or central district, resembles the other parts of the Highlands of Scotland, it contains the valleys of the rivers of Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet, and Oickel, with their tributary streams issuing from the neighbouring mountains. The shores bordering the Atlantic are wild, rocky, and mountainous. The Assynt Mountains are huge and barren, but the glens between afford excellent pasture for sheep. On the coasts of the numerous bays many tracts of land have been brought under cultivation, but the climate, from the constant rain and mists, is unfavourable to the growth of crops. The principal rivers are the Oickel, which enters the Firth of Dornoch, and is navigable for about 12 miles from its mouth, the Water of Fleet, the Water of Brora, the Water of Helmsdale, the Water of Hallidale, the Water of Strathy, the Naver, the Waters of Kenloch, Hope, Dionard, and Eribol. There are also lakes, the chief being Loch Assynt, Loch Elphin, Loch Leighal, Loch More, and Loch Shin, the last of which stretches 20 miles north-west to south-east, is about one mile broad, and abounds with salmon and trout. There are extensive deer forests, and abundance of all kinds of game. The Duke of Sutherland is the largest landowner. The minerals include rock crystals, pebbles and garnets. Sutherlandshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 1,297,914 acres. Pop. 20,179

WIGTOWNSHIRE, a county bounded on the east by Kirkcudbrightshire, south and west by the Irish Sea, and north by Ayrshire. The county is irregular and deeply indented by Loch Ryan and Luce Bay, which forms the Rhinns of Galloway (q.v.). The richest lands lie near the coast and on the banks of the rivers. The rising grounds in the east through the parish of Wigtown and the lower parts of Penningham are for the most part fit for tillage. The peninsula, called the Rhinns, is also good arable land. The hills in this part of the county rise to a considerable height, and act as a barrier against the westerly winds. The north districts called the Moors are bleak and hilly; they occupy nearly one-half of the county, and contain only a few patches of arable land. The principal rivers are the Cree, the Bladenock, the Tarff, the Luce, and others. The climate is mild and humid. The chief crops are oats and barley, also wheat, potatoes, and turnips. Dairy - farming and stock-breeding are also carried on. Slate and marble are found. Wigtownshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 311,984 acres. Pop. 31,998
